

Climate Change as a National Security Threat and What to Do About it

Categories : NSWG news, U.S. Strategy

This article, co-written by two NSWG members, analyzes the Fourth National Climate Assessment, a Congressionally mandated quadrennial review. The pair points out that this report is not just written by concerned scientists, but “includes input from 13 different departments and agencies across the U.S. government, including the Department of Defense.” Femia and Werrell are effective in conveying the sense of worry that the Assessment authors shared. Read the full article here.