

"How to Strike a Missile Deal with Iran"

Categories : Government, Nonproliferation policy, NSWG news, U.S. Strategy

In this article, Fitzpatrick argues that international parties should pressure Iran to cap its missile range at 2000-km (1,200-mile), a limit that Iran previously said is its maximum requirement. Further detailing this idea, Fitzpatrick notes that it could be adopted in North Korean negotiations, as well.

This article was originally published in Foreign Policy. Read it in full here.